Summary and TEKS

This 11th grade U.S. History class covers the history of the United States from the expansion of industry in the country in 1877 to present day America. Students will learn about many historical events and significant figures that contributed to making what the United States is today. Along with learning about the history of the United States, students will learn how to work individually and in groups, writing skills, how to be a good American citizen, how to analyze documents, and apply knowledge they learn to everyday life. They will be able to recall events such as the two world wars, the great depression, cold war episodes, the civil rights movement, and presidential policies. Students will be able to understand the cause and effects that past events in U.S. History had on creating the United States.

§113.41. United States History Studies Since 1877 (One Credit), Beginning with School Year 2011-2012.

(a) General requirements. Students shall be awarded one unit of credit for successful completion of this course.

(b) Introduction.

(1) In United States History Studies Since 1877, which is the second part of a two-year study that begins in Grade 8, students study the history of the United States from 1877 to the present. The course content is based on the founding documents of the U.S. government, which provide a framework for its heritage. Historical content focuses on the political, economic, and social events and issues related to industrialization and urbanization, major wars, domestic and foreign policies, and reform movements, including civil rights. Students examine the impact of geographic factors on major events and eras and analyze their causes and effects. Students examine the impact of constitutional issues on American society, evaluate the dynamic relationship of the three branches of the federal government, and analyze efforts to expand the democratic process. Students describe the relationship between the arts and popular culture and the times during which they were created. Students analyze the impact of technological innovations on American life. Students use critical-thinking skills and a variety of primary and secondary source material to explain and apply different methods that historians use to understand and interpret the past, including multiple points of view and historical context.

(2) To support the teaching of the essential knowledge and skills, the use of a variety of rich primary and secondary source material such as biographies, autobiographies, landmark cases of the U.S. Supreme Court, novels, speeches, letters, diaries, poetry, songs, and artworks is encouraged. Motivating resources are available from museums, historical sites, presidential libraries, and local and state preservation societies.

(3) The eight strands of the essential knowledge and skills for social studies are intended to be integrated for instructional purposes. Skills listed in the social studies skills strand in subsection (c) of this section should be incorporated into the teaching of all essential knowledge and skills for social studies. A greater depth of understanding of complex content material can be attained...
when integrated social studies content from the various disciplines and critical-thinking skills are taught together. Statements that contain the word "including" reference content that must be mastered, while those containing the phrase "such as" are intended as possible illustrative examples.

(4) Students identify the role of the U.S. free enterprise system within the parameters of this course and understand that this system may also be referenced as capitalism or the free market system.

(5) Throughout social studies in Kindergarten-Grade 12, students build a foundation in history; geography; economics; government; citizenship; culture; science, technology, and society; and social studies skills. The content, as appropriate for the grade level or course, enables students to understand the importance of patriotism, function in a free enterprise society, and appreciate the basic democratic values of our state and nation as referenced in the Texas Education Code (TEC), §28.002(h).

(6) Students understand that a constitutional republic is a representative form of government whose representatives derive their authority from the consent of the governed, serve for an established tenure, and are sworn to uphold the constitution.

(7) State and federal laws mandate a variety of celebrations and observances, including Celebrate Freedom Week.

(A) Each social studies class shall include, during Celebrate Freedom Week as provided under the TEC, §29.907, or during another full school week as determined by the board of trustees of a school district, appropriate instruction concerning the intent, meaning, and importance of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, including the Bill of Rights, in their historical contexts. The study of the Declaration of Independence must include the study of the relationship of the ideas expressed in that document to subsequent American history, including the relationship of its ideas to the rich diversity of our people as a nation of immigrants, the American Revolution, the formulation of the U.S. Constitution, and the abolitionist movement, which led to the Emancipation Proclamation and the women's suffrage movement.

(B) Each school district shall require that, during Celebrate Freedom Week or other week of instruction prescribed under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, students in Grades 3-12 study and recite the following text: "We hold these Truths to be self-evident, that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness--That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed."

(8) Students identify and discuss how the actions of U.S. citizens and the local, state, and federal governments have either met or failed to meet the ideals espoused in the founding documents.

(c) Knowledge and skills.

(1) History. The student understands the principles included in the Celebrate Freedom Week program. The student is expected to:

(A) analyze and evaluate the text, intent, meaning, and importance of the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, including the Bill of Rights, and identify the full text of the first three paragraphs of the Declaration of Independence;

(B) analyze and evaluate the application of these founding principles to historical events in U.S. history; and
(C) explain the contributions of the Founding Fathers such as Benjamin Rush, John Hancock, John Jay, John Witherspoon, John Peter Muhlenberg, Charles Carroll, and Jonathan Trumbull Sr.

(2) History. The student understands traditional historical points of reference in U.S. history from 1877 to the present. The student is expected to:

(A) identify the major characteristics that define an historical era;
(B) identify the major eras in U.S. history from 1877 to the present and describe their defining characteristics;
(C) apply absolute and relative chronology through the sequencing of significant individuals, events, and time periods; and

(A) describe the impact of events such as the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution and the War Powers Act on the relationship between the legislative and executive branches of government; and

(B) evaluate the impact of relationships among the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government, including Franklin D. Roosevelt's attempt to increase the number of U.S. Supreme Court justices and the presidential election of 2000.

(21) Government. The student understands the impact of constitutional issues on American society. The student is expected to:

(A) analyze the effects of landmark U.S. Supreme Court decisions, including Brown v. Board of Education, and other U.S. Supreme Court decisions such as Plessy v. Ferguson, Hernandez v. Texas, Tinker v. Des Moines, Wisconsin v. Yoder, and White v. Regester;

(B) discuss historical reasons why the constitution has been amended; and

(C) evaluate constitutional change in terms of strict construction versus judicial interpretation.

(22) Citizenship. The student understands the concept of American exceptionalism. The student is expected to:

(A) discuss Alexis de Tocqueville's five values crucial to America's success as a constitutional republic: liberty, egalitarianism, individualism, populism, and laissez-faire;
(B) describe how the American values identified by Alexis de Tocqueville are different and unique from those of other nations; and

(C) describe U.S. citizens as people from numerous places throughout the world who hold a common bond in standing for certain self-evident truths.

(23) Citizenship. The student understands efforts to expand the democratic process. The student is expected to:

(A) identify and analyze methods of expanding the right to participate in the democratic process, including lobbying, non-violent protesting, litigation, and amendments to the U.S. Constitution;

(B) evaluate various means of achieving equality of political rights, including the 19th, 24th, and 26th amendments and congressional acts such as the American Indian Citizenship Act of 1924; and

(C) explain how participation in the democratic process reflects our national ethos, patriotism, and civic responsibility as well as our progress to build a “more perfect union.”

(24) Citizenship. The student understands the importance of effective leadership in a constitutional republic. The student is expected to:

(A) describe qualities of effective leadership; and

(B) evaluate the contributions of significant political and social leaders in the United States such as Andrew Carnegie, Thurgood Marshall, Billy Graham, Barry Goldwater, Sandra Day O’Connor, and Hillary Clinton.

(25) Culture. The student understands the relationship between the arts and the times during which they were created. The student is expected to:

(A) describe how the characteristics and issues in U.S. history have been reflected in various genres of art, music, film, and literature;

(B) describe both the positive and negative impacts of significant examples of cultural movements in art, music, and literature such as Tin Pan Alley, the Harlem Renaissance, the Beat Generation, rock and roll, the Chicano Mural Movement, and country and western music on American society;

(C) identify the impact of popular American culture on the rest of the world over time; and

(D) analyze the global diffusion of American culture through the entertainment industry via various media.

(26) Culture. The student understands how people from various groups contribute to our national identity. The student is expected to:

(A) explain actions taken by people to expand economic opportunities and political rights, including those for racial, ethnic, and religious minorities as well as women, in American society;

(B) discuss the Americanization movement to assimilate immigrants and American Indians into American culture;

(C) explain how the contributions of people of various racial, ethnic, gender, and religious groups shape American culture;
(D) identify the political, social, and economic contributions of women such as Frances Willard, Jane Addams, Eleanor Roosevelt, Dolores Huerta, Sonia Sotomayor, and Oprah Winfrey to American society;

(F) discuss the importance of congressional Medal of Honor recipients, including individuals of all races and genders such as Vernon J. Baker, Alvin York, and Roy Benavidez.

(27) Science, technology, and society. The student understands the impact of science, technology, and the free enterprise system on the economic development of the United States. The student is expected to:

(A) explain the effects of scientific discoveries and technological innovations such as electric power, telephone and satellite communications, petroleum-based products, steel production, and computers on the economic development of the United States;

(B) explain how specific needs result in scientific discoveries and technological innovations in agriculture, the military, and medicine, including vaccines; and

(C) understand the impact of technological and management innovations and their applications in the workplace and the resulting productivity enhancements for business and labor such as assembly line manufacturing, time-study analysis, robotics, computer management, and just-in-time inventory management.

(28) Science, technology, and society. The student understands the influence of scientific discoveries, technological innovations, and the free enterprise system on the standard of living in the United States. The student is expected to:

(A) analyze how scientific discoveries, technological innovations, and the application of these by the free enterprise system, including those in transportation and communication, improve the standard of living in the United States;

(B) explain how space technology and exploration improve the quality of life; and

(C) understand how the free enterprise system drives technological innovation and its application in the marketplace such as cell phones, inexpensive personal computers, and global positioning products.

(29) Social studies skills. The student applies critical-thinking skills to organize and use information acquired from a variety of valid sources, including electronic technology. The student is expected to:

(A) use a variety of both primary and secondary valid sources to acquire information and to analyze and answer historical questions;

(B) analyze information by sequencing, categorizing, identifying cause-and-effect relationships, comparing and contrasting, finding the main idea, summarizing, making generalizations, making predictions, drawing inferences, and drawing conclusions;

(C) understand how historians interpret the past (historiography) and how their interpretations of history may change over time;

(D) use the process of historical inquiry to research, interpret, and use multiple types of sources of evidence;
(E) evaluate the validity of a source based on language, corroboration with other sources, and information about the author, including points of view, frames of reference, and historical context;

(F) identify bias in written, oral, and visual material;

(G) identify and support with historical evidence a point of view on a social studies issue or event; and

(H) use appropriate skills to analyze and interpret social studies information such as maps, graphs, presentations, speeches, lectures, and political cartoons.

(30) Social studies skills. The student communicates in written, oral, and visual forms. The student is expected to:

(A) create written, oral, and visual presentations of social studies information;

(B) use correct social studies terminology to explain historical concepts; and

(C) use different forms of media to convey information, including written to visual and statistical to written or visual, using available computer software as appropriate.

(31) Social studies skills. The student uses geographic tools to collect, analyze, and interpret data. The student is expected to:

(A) create thematic maps, graphs, and charts representing various aspects of the United States; and

(B) pose and answer questions about geographic distributions and patterns shown on maps, graphs, charts, and available databases.

(32) Social studies skills. The student uses problem-solving and decision-making skills, working independently and with others, in a variety of settings. The student is expected to:

(A) use a problem-solving process to identify a problem, gather information, list and consider options, consider advantages and disadvantages, choose and implement a solution, and evaluate the effectiveness of the solution; and

(B) use a decision-making process to identify a situation that requires a decision, gather information, identify options, predict consequences, and take action to implement a decision.

Statement of Fit:

In Texas, the student entering a high school level course about United States history will have taken World History the year before. The student will come into the classroom with background information from a global perspective. They learned about important people, events, and ideas that marked, changed, and influenced people from the earliest history to the present. In addition to that global perspective, the student will have covered U.S. history from the early colonial period through Reconstruction in their eighth grade social studies class. There, the material covered, “focuses on the political, economic, religious, and social events and issues related to the colonial and revolutionary eras, the creation and ratification of the U.S. Constitution, challenges of the early republic, the Age of Jackson, westward expansion, sectionalism, Civil War, and Reconstruction” (TEKS, §113.20.A(1)). When students take this class, they will likely be taking junior-level reading, math, and science classes (as well as elective classes). They will definitely be expected to read the textbook material as well as any auxiliary material provided and be able to formulate and write coherent responses on class topics. The students will be expected to connect the information they are learning in their math and science classes to scientific and mathematic contributions by Americans. They will be prepared to evaluate where the U.S. stands as a global power and assess how the U.S. has reacted (in terms of foreign policy) to scientific or mathematical advancements in other countries. By the end of the course, the students will be ready to apply the knowledge they gained to their senior level courses. Throughout the year, the students will be guided to make analytical applications of basic information to topics in government, sociology, and economics. They will be allowed to make connections that will provide the foundation for their next level of social studies.
General Goals

• TLW understand the information for the TAKS test.

• TLW be able to name specific events that shaped the United States’ history.

• TLW be able to analyze the causes and effects of World Wars 1 and 2

• TLW understand the changes that were made to the nation during the Great Depression.

• TLW be able to name influential persons from 1877 till the present in the U.S.A.

• TLW further their ability to write essays and papers.

• TLW further their reading capabilities.

• TLW learn how to cooperate and collaborate with others.
Rationale

The purpose of this course is to teach students about the events, people, and places involved in the history of the United States of America. By educating students on the history of the United States, from 1877 to the present day, students will be able to critically analyze the effects that certain events had on the shaping of the country into the modern age, the people who led those events and inspired others, and the changes in society over the years. Using the textbook, America Pathways to the Present: Modern American History, students will be able to read information, and then apply it to different activities, projects, and worksheets that will be given to them throughout the year. This will allow them to apply their knowledge in different ways, to ensure full comprehension of the material. They will also prove their knowledge on various quizzes and tests, as decided by the teacher. The benefit of learning about the events, people, changes, and places involved in U.S History is to help students not only know more about the country they reside in, but also to become well rounded in their education as well. Studies show that students who study history, have, in general, a much larger capability of thinking critically, and having a global mindset. Studying the history of the U.S will also help fuel the desire of the students to become better citizens, and perhaps even look into having careers that involve the government that they learned about in this course. This could include law enforcement, or maybe even politics. If a student knows more about the past, they are more likely to see the patterns that history has in the present day and in the future. It will help them become better citizens in their day to day lives. This is why students should be educated about the history of the United States.

Assignments:
- Assessment Survey: The survey will be used to assess the student’s familiarity with the 20 most important topics to be covered in this course. The student will be asked to rate from a one to a five their confidence level in a given topic. In addition to that, the student will also be expected to write at least three things that they can think of in relation to that topic.
- Imperialism Project:
Images: http://hto.osu.edu/opper/lesson-plans/american-imperialism
Handouts: http://hto.osu.edu/sites/default/files/American_Imperialism_Worksheet.pdf

The students will create their own presentation on the images. They will choose one and write a two page narrative pretending to be a character in that image. This will count as a test grade.

Assignments:
Study Guide Homework Review:
The teacher will create a study guide for the material covered in weeks two, three, and four. It will be handed out the Thursday before Week Five. It will have divergent as well as convergent questions to prepare the student for the last week of testable material (Week Six) and to assess the student’s evaluative skills. The study guide will be due May 01 and will count as a test grade.

Learner Learned Project:
The student will create a 3-5 minute presentation on the topic that they had reported to feel least knowledgeable on. The teacher will assign the material based on the students’ responses to the Assessment Survey handed out during the first week of school so that no two students present on the same material. A rubric will also be handed out at that time. The first day of working on the assignment, the class will go to the library, the second will be spent in the classroom, and the third day will be a day in the computer lab. The project need not be digital, but it will require the student to research more information than what was presented and discussed in class. Presentations will take place the last week of school, after which the students will watch a movie of their choosing (must be historical and school-appropriate). A copy of the presentation material is due May 28 regardless of presentation date and it will be counted as a test grade.
